CuraMedix is an emerging leader in medical technology focused on the development, distribution and utilization of regenerative medicine technologies to include; Extracorporeal Pulse Activation Technology (EPAT®). Our products improve medical professionals' and patients' lives around the globe. Our technological innovations are setting new standards in the treatment of musculoskeletal disorders.

EPAT® devices accelerate healing while improving clinical outcomes non-invasively with all the benefits of traditional treatment methods including invasive procedures and without the risks. EPAT® Treatment Systems are scientifically proven, versatile and can be used for a broad range of musculoskeletal conditions.

We believe that advances in regenerative medicine technologies – particularly non-invasive products and procedures – are transforming patient care. Drawing on the experience of physicians around the world, and the medical and technical expertise of our partners and associates, we're continuing to introduce innovative products, procedures and techniques that treat root cause, accelerate the healing process, reduce expenditures and improve the overall patient experience.

Earlier intervention. System versatility. Our EPAT® systems help tackle many of the challenges of traditional treatment methods do not. EPAT® devices treat root cause of injury and provide a long-term healing solution without incisions eliminating scar tissue formation, risk of infection, ending the care cycle and reducing patient expenditures while enhancing practice revenues.
