

Brooks Johnson (pictured on right), a former sprinter and now one of America's most famous track coaches was presented the AAPSM 2014 Golden Foot Award. The Award was presented at the AAPSM Awards luncheon on Friday, March 14, 2014 during the AAPSM Spring Training and Stand Alone Meeting in Tampa. AAPSM Fellow Amol Saxena, DPM (pictured on left) presented the award to Brooks. The Golden Foot Award is presented to individuals who, through effort and example, have significantly contributed to the public awareness of the importance of physical fitness and the role of podiatric sports medicine in the care of the athlete. The example that Brooks has set as an avid physical fitness proponent is indeed an inspiration to all and most deserving for him to join our esteemed list of past recipients such as David Beckham, Walter Payton, Warren Moon, Alberto Salazar, to name a few.
